The Voyageur Story

Construction for Voyageur School began on May 24, 1967. The build began as a need to accommodate the expanding enrollment in the North Crestview area. On February 10, 1968, the top floor of Voyageur School was complete and ready to welcome classes. On this day, Voyageur students who had been temporarily attending Crestview School since September, packed up their books and trekked over to Voyageur.

“It certainly was quite a sight to see - book laden students strung out in a long line trudging through the snow to their new school.” - A quote from SJASD archives

The school opened with 11 classrooms from Kindergarten to Grade 6 with 338 students coming from Crestview School and 32 students moving over from Heritage Elementary. At this time, the lower floor of the school was still under construction.
