Behaviour

nobody's perfect

Stay Calm and Connected

- Help your child calm down. Children can choose better behaviour when they are calm. Sometimes they need help to calm down. Babies are often calmed by cuddling, rocking and singing. Sometimes you need to take a child away from the difficult situation. You may find it helps to take a few deep breaths with your child and let your muscles relax.
- Listen to feelings. Empathy means being able to understand what other people are feeling. When you try to understand your child's feelings, you show him that his feelings matter. He knows that you respect them. By understanding better the reasons for his behaviour, you build the connections between you. He feels that you care.
- Help your child put her feelings into words. Talk about common feelings, like happiness, sadness, fear and anger. Give your child's feelings a name. For example, you might say, "I see that you are sad." Or "I'm glad you're happy today! Did something really good happen?" Children learn how other people feel by talking about feelings. They learn empathy when their own feelings are respected and understood.
- Accept your child's feelings. Let your child know it is okay to be upset and angry. Other people have those feelings too. You can accept her negative feelings without accepting negative behaviour. It is okay to be angry, but it is not okay to hit other people.
- Stay calm. When your child breaks the rules, losing your temper will not help. Children can think more clearly when you speak calmly. Sometimes it can be very hard for a parent to be calm and reasonable. Be a good example. If you are so angry that you think you might say or do something you will be sorry for, take a moment for yourself. Be sure your child is in a safe place. Spend a few minutes alone until you feel calmer.

HEALTHY LIVING

Discovering the surprising health benefits of cake

Maybe cake isn't so bad for us after all.

As a public health dietitian, I often find myself engaged in conversations with my clients about how our perceptions about food affect our health and well-being. In a group discussion with clients on family nutrition a few weeks ago, I asked whether they thought it was okay to eat cake.

After a moment of silence, one individual piped up, "Well, there are no nutrients in cake (and) it has empty calories."

"There is too much sugar in it!" a second person asserted.

And a third person, possibly looking for compromise, offered: "Only if you eat a tiny piece."

Many in the group responded that they ate cake during family celebrations or outings with friends, but that they often felt guilty or anxious about eating it because it wasn't "healthy." Others said they also felt bad about not eating cake, because they wanted some, but knew that it didn't fit into their diet plan.

As the conversation continued, it soon became apparent that everyone in the group – those that occasionally ate cake and those that didn't eat it at all – felt poorly about themselves. Their diets, and feelings of self-worth, were being dictated by the message that some foods are "good" and some are "bad" based on the nutrients food provides, for example, how many calories, nutrients and vitamins are present.

The problem with this message is that it suggests the main value of food is in its physical aspect – how many calories, nutrients and vitamins are present. It does not acknowledge how food and eating contributes to other aspects of our well-being, including our social, mental, spiritual and emotional health. For example, if eating a piece of cake connects us to our friends, family, and culture through its acquisition, preparation, sharing, and celebration, then it is adding great value to our lives, and should be appreciated as more than simply consuming calories and sugar.

Ellyn Satter, an internationally recognized expert on food and eating, had it right when she said: "When the joy goes out of eating, nutrition suffers."

Her point is that all foods can be rewarding, nourishing and healing, and there is nothing wrong with giving ourselves permission to enjoy what we like to eat. Sometimes we will want cake, and at other times we would be better satisfied by a meal. Paying attention to how food makes us feel allows us to find the right match. No matter our size, our history, or any illness we might have, we all deserve to nourish our complete selves with food we enjoy, including cake.

Ukrainian Poppy Seed Cake

Adapted from the Moosewood Cookbook
By Mollie Katzen

This is a recipe my grandmother always made for my grandfather on his birthday in the summer. It has a special significance in my family and it's sure delicious to eat outside on the deck with a cup of tea.

Ingredients

- Yield: 1 Bundt cake Time: 1 hour
 - 1 cup butter, at room temperature
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 3 eggs
 - 2 cups unbleached flour
 - 1 tbsp baking powder
 - 1 tsp baking soda
 - 1/2 tsp salt
 - 3/4 cup poppy seed
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1 tsp vanilla extract
 - 3 tbsp fresh lemon juice
 - 1 tsp grated lemon rind
- Orange glaze
- 1/2 cup orange juice
 - 1 -2 tbsp sugar
 - 1 tbsp fresh lemon juice

Directions

1. Preheat oven to 350°F (175°C). Butter a 10 inch tube or bundt pan.
2. CAKE: Cream the butter and sugar in a large mixing bowl. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each.
3. Sift together the dry ingredients in a separate bowl.
4. Add the dry ingredients to the butter/egg mixture alternately with the poppy seeds and milk; beginning and ending with the dry mixture.
5. Stir batter just enough to blend thoroughly, adding the vanilla, lemon juice and lemon rind at the end.
6. Spread the batter into the prepared pan, and bake for about 40 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in the cake comes out clean.
7. Cool for 10 minutes, then invert onto a cake platter. Allow to cool completely before adding the orange glaze and/or slicing.
8. ORANGE GLAZE: Combine the ingredients in a small saucepan and bring to a boil. Lower heat and simmer uncovered for about 3 minutes.
9. Pour the hot glaze onto the cooled cake. Let stand at least 10 minutes before slicing.
